Time for a cuppa

Dementia is the major health concern of our time. There will be one million people living with dementia in the UK by 2021. Often, it is their families who step in and care for them. These families aren't getting the specialist support they need – and we want to change that. Ultimately, we want every family who needs an Admiral Nurse to have access to one.

could pay for two families to receive advice on helping a person with dementia who might be experiencing anxiety or depression could pay for in-depth, specialist support from an Admiral Nurse for a person contacting our Helpline could pay for a new Admiral Nurse for an hour, reaching a family in crisis with nowhere else to turn

£27

£70

could help fund a Helpline Admiral Nurse for two hours in the evening, helping carers in at the toughest times, when other sources of support have closed for the night

£94

could buy the training that ensures an Admiral Nurse is always at the forefront of excellence in dementia care

Let's work together to make sure nobody faces dementia alone.
